This is the consideration, that the coal interest of Canada may be specially protected and taken care of without regard to home interests, that capital may be induced to go from this country into Canada, as it has already largely gone, thereby escaping taxation and its share of the public burdens here, then to come back in the shape of coal at a reduced price, to the injury of our home product. If we cannot tax that capital here, we should catch it on its return. It is said the article of coal stands at the same level with firewood. Now, bituminous coal forms no part of the ordinary fuel of New England. It is used solely for gas and steam purposes, and to some extent in manufacturing, and occasionally to make a sen-coal fire in the parlor of the wealthy. It does not form any part of the fuel for the poor.

Speeches.

Reported for the Daily Intelligencer.

In the House of Delegates February , 1865, when Mr. Ferguson had concluded the speech (upon the test oath bill) printed in this paper Friday morning, he was replied to by Mr. Lamb, of Ohio county, and in rejoinder to that this State, carrying them out and enforcing them; instructing the officers of elections when these allens offer to vote to reject their votes, and not allow them to participate in the elections in this State.

State.

[A colloquy here ensued between Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Lamb, in course of which the latter explained that the law quoted by the former was passed by the General Assembly of the reorganized government of Virginia about a year after the constitution for the New State had been adopted by the people within its proposed boundaries. Mr. Ferguson resumed.]

its proposed boundaries. Mr. Ferguson resumed.]

Then, Mr. Speaker, we have here the cotemporaneous expest ion of the Constitution by the Legislature of Virginia, as to what the term "titzen" in this State meant: n law passed while the Constitution itself was being adopted in this State, in organizing a new State out of the fragments of the old—a law passed cotemporaneous with the Constitution under which we are acting, declaring that men gullty of the very nots recited in this bill should be deemed to have exparinated themselves and

The gentleman contends that there is no danger such as I was talking about, of these rebels returning and controlling the elections. Now, I do not suppose if you would make a fair vote between the Union and rebel citizans of this State that there would be any, but does not everybody know this State will, like all others, be divided into parties. The old Democratic party, or which I was a member all my life until his war commenced, and that I once thought was so remarkable a party—took snuff—Well no doubt they have organized in this State and will keep up their organization. I cannot say that I particularly desire to see my old the county of Ohlo, very little short of the vote for Mr. Lincoln. Other counties will show considerable Democratic strength by and by.
